Central Vacuum Service, LLC offers installation of built-in vacuum systems as well as service, repair, and replacement of all makes and models of central vacuum systems. Proper installation of the pipe and wiring that make up a central vacuum system is the most critical factor in a properly functioning central vacuum system. It's more important than hardware, i.e., the vacuum unit and hoses. Most people tend to focus on just the equipment, and the machine is essential; however, it's relatively easy to replace hardware while it's impossible to replace the vacuum piping within the walls of your home. In other words, a poor quality central vacuum unit can easily be upgraded, but a poor quality installation (the pipes and wiring) is a much more difficult problem to address. The company repairs all makes and models of central vacuum cleaners and any other issues related to your central vacuum system. Central Vacuum Service also offers brand new central vacuum units to replace an existing unit. The company's website features more details about Central Vacuum Service, central vacuum systems, customer testimonials, and the company blog.
