Searcy Building Systems is a value-added distributor of pre-engineered metal buildings with a decades-long reputation for attention to detail, honesty and customer service. Headquartered in Union City, Tennessee, Searcy Building Systems has 17 plants located strategically across the United States in order to service all areas with the most competitive building prices and convenient delivery times available. The company's knowledgeable and professional building consultants and customer service representatives will guide you through the design and delivery processes making sure to point out things that could potentially cost you time and/or money down the road. They'll listen to your needs and design a building that fits any requirements — whether you're an experienced general contractor with a long list of specs for a metal warehouse building, a committee scoping out pricing for a steel church building or a homeowner looking for extra storage. With more than 65 years of experience in the industry, you can be confident the Searcy Buildings Systems family has the expertise and customer service to help you get exactly what you need out of your investment.
